THEM, TOO Two Chinese men carry a banner saying "Huangyan [Panatag Shoal to Filipinos] will always belong to China" as they walk toward the Philippine embassy in Beijing on Friday. The monthlong standoff between China and the Philippines over Scarborough Shoal is snowballing with hints of economic retaliation and sharpening public opinion, which narrows the space for the diplomatic resolution that both sides endlessly claim they are seeking.

PH bananas rotting in Sino ports

DAVAO CITY—Chinese authorities on Friday continued to refuse entry to some 1,500 containers containing Cavendish bananas because of an alleged finding that fruits earlier sent by Mindanao banana growers there showed signs of disease found only in coconuts.

Stephen Antig, president of the Pilipino Banana Growers and Exporters Association—which groups 18 companies in Mindanao—said that as of 3 p.m. Thursday the bananas were being left to rot at the ports of Dalian, Shanghai, and Xingang as Chinese authorities insisted on the country's new phytosanitary rules for bananas arriving from the Philippines.

"Mindanao exporters feel we are being harassed," Antig said, adding that it could be related to the standoff between the Philippines and China at Scarborough Shoal in the West Philippine Sea.

He said, however, that the exporters' group did not want "to think of it as political because we are businessmen."

In Manila, presidential spokesperson Edwin Lacierda reiterated an earlier statement playing down a link between the Scarborough dispute and the new inspection rules in China for Philippine fruit exports.

China says PH escalating tensions

By Christine O. Avendaño

BEIJING—China on Friday accused the Philippines of escalating an already tense territorial dispute in the South China Sea following a noisy but peaceful anti-Chinese protest in Manila.

But Beijing reiterated its commitment to solve its dispute with Manila over Scarborough Shoal diplomatically and said it remained in contact with Philippine officials here and in Manila.

Hong Lei, spokesperson for the Chinese foreign ministry, made the statements in a brief interview with Asian journalists who were on a press tour here.

The Chinese news service Xinhua reported on Friday that a Chinese journalist planted China's flag on Scarborough Shoal recently. But the Philippine Coast Guard, which has a vessel in the area, denied there was such an action at the shoal.

Retirement homes should be near places of work, recreation

By Tessa R. Salazar

DO RETIREES commonly need to be reminded of their mortality, such that the primary considerations for a so-called ideal location for them would have to be near advanced medical facilities? Is it just about giving them space and wide alleys to allow for wheelchairs and hospital beds? Do they have to spend their sunset years confined in elderly-friendly structures and facilities?

THE ROBINSONS Land Corp. team who help make one Filipino dream of having a decent home come true.

EACH week for one season, TV5 show 'Extreme Makeover: Home Edition Philippines' will build a new home for the hardworking Filipino family.

Developer gives back to community

By Theresa S. Samaniego

THE LAST few years have seen developers, both old and new, take pleasure in the steady demand for housing and rake in good profits from these and many projects.

However, the litmus test of a company's success lies not on how much profit it can generate, but rather on how it can affect, touch and improve the lives of the people.

Take the case of property developer Robinsons Land Corp., which learned to look beyond profit and eventually gave the business of constructing homes a new face and meaning.

A notch higher

Known for its numerous corporate social responsibility programs, RLC took it a notch higher and decided to join hands with TV 5 in its new show "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition."

The said move is in line with the company's desire to further benefit deserving Filipinos by helping them build and acquire decent homes.

The company admitted in a statement that through this TV show, it hopes to revive the age-old Filipino concept of bayanihan and kapatiran.

"We pledge to support the new program which aims to drive less fortunate individuals by inspiring them with homes that have been rebuilt and they can take pride in," RLC said.

The said project will jumpstart RLC's corporate social responsibility program of community stewardship as it recognizes a greater corporate role in society.

"More than just delivering quality products and services to customers, the company is an active supporter of local residents and various organizations and assists the less fortunate in the communities it does business in," it claimed.

With the company's participation in the Extreme Makeover: Home Edition show, all its business units—Commercial Centers Division, Office Buildings Division, Hotels and Residences, Communities, and Homes—are able to get together and contribute to this life-changing effort.

Also, RLC will share its wide range expertise in construction to guarantee success of each project.

Design team

Aside from RLC however, the Extreme Makeover: Home Edition Philippines will have a design team composed of industry professionals who will also share their expertise in the program's home construction projects.

The group is composed of interior designer and socialite philanthropist Tessa Prieto-Valdes, fashion model Denise Laurel who serves as project manager, professional interior designer Tristan Arcellana, carpentry and DIY guy in charge of special projects such as creating rooms suited to the needs of each family, and interior design consultants Marilou Pascual Montenegro and Jelly Belmonte.

WISH granted: Extreme Makeover: Home Edition (EMHE) Philippines helped fulfill Rogelio's dream to have his family's home renovated.

For its pilot episode, RLC subsidiary brand Robinsons Homes (whose upcoming project Brighton Bulihang is located in Sta. Mesa, Bulacan) and the Extreme Makeover: Home Edition Philippines honored Rogelio Nueva, a hard-working public school teacher who dreamt of giving his family a decent life by providing them a comfortable home they can call their own.

"RLC aims to help Rogelio by undergoing an extreme makeover of his home," the company said.

Luckily, Rogelio's wish was granted as Extreme Makeover: Home Edition (EMHE) Philippines helped him achieve his desire to have his family's home, which has fallen into disrepair, finally renovated.

EMHE Philippines is based on the original Endemol International franchise, Extreme Makeover: Home Edition, which has a goal to change lives one home at a time.

New homes, new hope

With the theme "Bagong Bahay, Bagong Buhay," the show gives new homes and brings new hope to deserving Filipino families and communities.

Each week for one season, "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition Philippines" will build a new home for a Filipino family whose members have shared much of what little they have to their community.

And while the family is treated to a much-deserved vacation, a group of dedicated people will completely reconstruct the family's home within a short span of time.

The show is led by reality show host and news personality Paolo Bediones who also takes on the role of producer.

Fast-food chain's refreshing interiors elevate dining experience

THE 17th Jollibee branch in Pasig City

By Theresa S. Samaniego

FOR DECADES now, Filipino consumers have been smitten by its wide, jolly eyes and endearing smile—not to mention the "Langhap Sarap" Pinoy products that this charming character named Jollibee have since introduced to the palates of most Filipino children.

And while Jollibee, the No. 1 fast-food chain in the country, has been around for some time, it never fails to raise the level of dining experience of its customers.

Recently, Jollibee unveiled its latest and newest branch located on Amang Rodriguez, corner Marcos Highway in Pasig City. The 17th Jollibee branch in Pasig sports a modern, stylish design with refreshing interiors that contribute to a more relaxing ambience.

THOUGH sporting a new and fresh look, Jollibee ensures that it remains to be the best place for Filipinos to hang out.

Second home

"At Jollibee, we constantly innovate and find ways to give our customers a pleasant dining experience, especially since most of them consider our stores as their second home," said Joel Villanueva, assistant vice president and head of Jollibee Marketing's retail team.

AERIAL view of the Olympic Park

Ready, set, 'green' for London 2012 Olympics

By Theresa S. Samaniego

EVEN BEFORE the lighting of the torch, the passing of the baton, the race to the finish line and the proclamation of winners, one country has already emerged as champion in the upcoming 2012 Olympic Games.

The United Kingdom, armed with a strong determination to ward off the ill-effects of climate change and to uphold its commitment to be the greenest government, has recently finished constructing the venue for what may be the first truly "green" Olympics.

The London 2012 Olympic Park features innovative construction methods and showcases a sustainable design that may be worth emulating. It will serve as venue to the 2012 Olympic Games from July 27 to Aug. 12 and the 2012 Paralympic Games from Aug. 29 to Sept. 9.

"It once neglected industrial-ized area of our capital has been transformed into an urban Park for the 21st century, creating a new ecology of wildlife, plants and woodlands," said British envoy Stephen Lillie at the "100 days countdown before the Olympics" gathering held at the Manila Polo Club last month.

"From reducing urban heat to combating the effects of climate change, the Park will provide a powerful environmental legacy for the capital, as well as have London 2012 into the first truly green games," Lillie said.

Built on a brownfield site characterized by large areas of derelict industrial land, the Olympic Park that Lillie had mentioned boasts improved infrastructure and world-class sporting facilities.

But before the world's attention zeroes in on the games to be held there as well as the history and records that may be created, it is also worth knowing how the Park was constructed, what materials were used and how its operations will continue to be sustainable and environment-friendly over the next decades.

Data provided by the British Embassy Manila showed that for one, almost 98 percent of the materials reclaimed during the site cleanup and demolition were reused in the creation of the Olympic Park.

During the construction itself, over 50 percent of materials delivered and the waste removed by the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) were transferred by trains and barges, thus severely reducing the carbon emissions associated with delivering by road.

Each of the different venues of the Olympic Park had also then been designed and built to be as energy-efficient and as sustainable as possible. For instance, all sports venues will use at least 40 percent less water than equivalent buildings through certain initiatives such as collecting rainwater on roofs so that this can be recycled for the toilets.

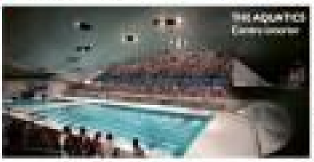

Meanwhile, here is a brief description of each area and how the UK government has made each venue an example of a truly green infrastructure.

1 Olympic Stadium. Located in the south of the Olympic Park, the stadium will have a capacity of 80,000 seats during the games. The venue, according to data from the British Embassy Manila, was made 75 percent lighter in terms of steel use compared to other stadiums. It also features a low-carbon concrete made from industrial waste.

Steel and concrete use was further reduced by designing the lower section of the stadium to sit within a bowl in the ground. The top ring of the stadium was built using surplus gas pipes—a visual testament to London 2012's "reduce, reuse, recycle" approach to sustainability.

Construction began in May 2008 and was completed in just under three years, with the final piece of turf laid in April 2011. With the stadium's flexible design, it is hoped that it will continue to be a venue for sport and athletics, as well as cultural and community events, even after the London 2012 Olympics.

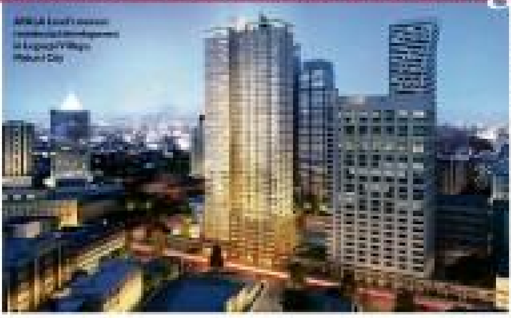

2 Velodrome. This is the most sustainable venue in the Olympic Park in terms of design and construction, as it is almost 100 percent naturally ventilated and makes

On the road with mom

Quick trips you can take with your mom to celebrate her special day

By Pam Pastor and Tobie Yang

Sonya's Garden

Barangay Buck Estate Alfonso, Cavite (near Tagaytay City)

[illegible]

This homey garden offers a refreshing break from the city. You can choose to go for the day or stay the night and enjoy Sonya's fresh fare and relaxing amenities. Go for the set menu to get the full Sonya experience. Try the salad with her special homemade dressing. (It's so good you'd want to bring a bottle home—and you can!) The pasta is good too. Make sure to drop by the bakery and bring home cheese bopis and pinwheel cookies.

Patis Tito Garden Cafe (formerly Kusina Salud)

283 Barangay Sta. Cruz Putol, San Pablo, Laguna

[illegible]

Go on an old-school food trip at Kusina Salud. Enjoy the vintage interiors and dishes from these set menus or order à la carte. Some favorites include the Inasal Bakla, Lumpiang Shanghai with Cheese, Sinalubong Pako, Beef Salpicao a la Pobre and their Classic Bulalo.

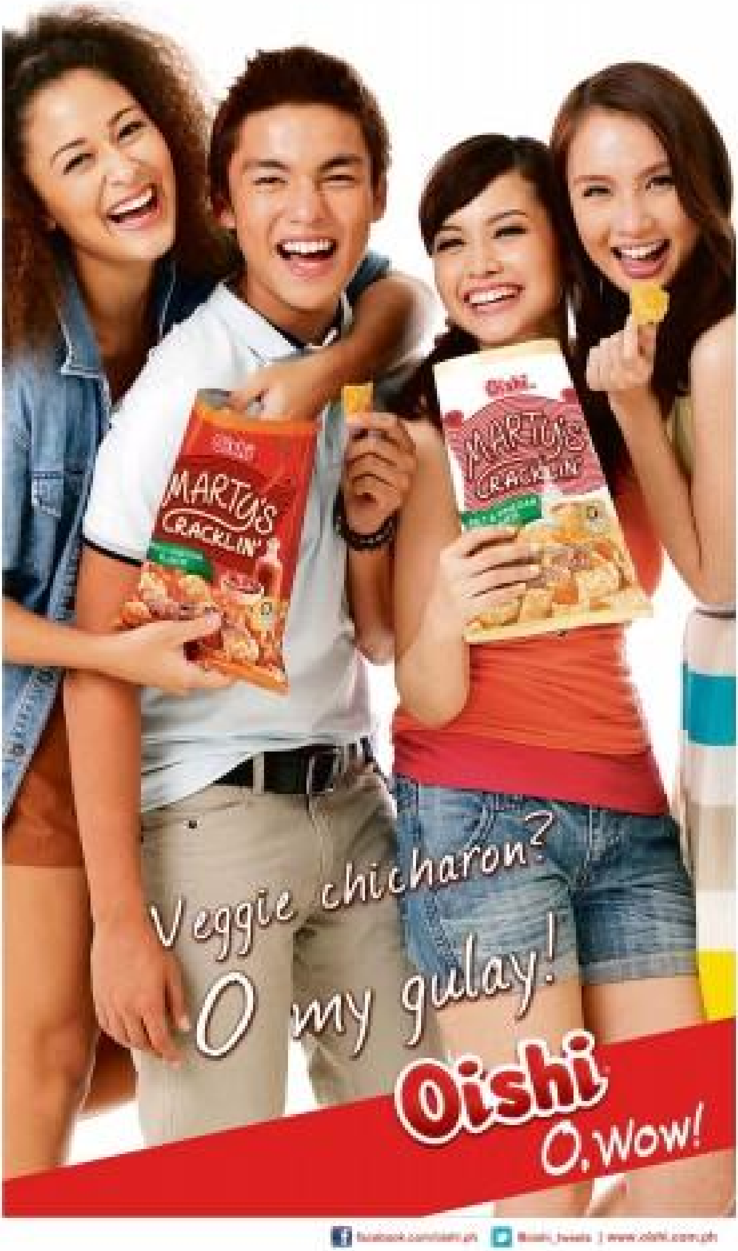

Crescent Moon Cafe

Araceli Road Barangay Dalig, Antipolo City

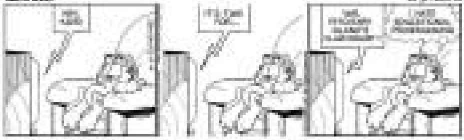

[illegible]

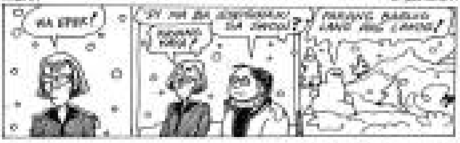

For a dose of good food and pottery, bring your mom to Crescent Moon Cafe in Antipolo. Their suman is a popular merienda treat that you can also take home. It goes perfectly with the mango. Be sure to try the Thai appetizer of wrapped singkamas leaves which always receives raves from diners. Stop by the pottery studio and bring home dinnerware created by Lanelle Abueva Fernando.

PH gaming industry bids for higher stakes in Asian market

The gaming industry is showing robust potential in the Philippines amid positive economic indicators and high governance trust ratings

GAMING in the Philippines? More Fun. This could very well be a slogan that the tourism industry might want to consider in promoting the country as a gaming destination. The Philippines, it seems, is in the best position economically for a casino industry to prosper and eventually become a major player in gaming in Asia, and sharing stellar rights with Macau and Singapore.

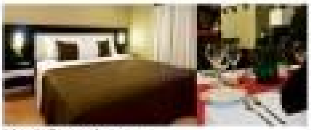

THE CASINO at Thunderbird Resort in Poro Point continues to attract a growing number of gaming patrons.

Richgold weddings: taste and elegance reinvented

NEWLY launched Richgold Weddings, which now gets a huge market share of young couples wanting to have a more youthful modern approach to their wedding, is known for its more modern yet elegant styling given its unique young dynamic team headed by its executive chef, Bryan Regis. Whether it's a small cocktail party for friends or a grand corporate event, the goal is the same: deeply satisfying the guests. So how does a caterer accomplish this grand task? It all starts with a few simple questions. Richgold Weddings would be very happy to answer these at www.richgoldweddings.com, or visit them at Jardin de Zenaida, Sgt. Esguerra, Quezon City or call 415-4480.
